

Contents

1	Extended introduction	1
1.1	Motivation and research purpose.....	1
1.2	Problems and shortcomings of empirical studies on the subject	5
1.3	Contributions of the thesis.....	9
1.4	Identification of potentially relevant future research.....	13
1.5	References	14
2	What makes countries initiate WTO disputes on food-related issues? ..	18
2.1	Introduction	18
2.2	Facts and figures on WTO dispute settlement.....	19
2.3	Empirical analyses on general dispute initiation	22
2.4	Assessing relevance of determinants.....	25
2.4.1.	A binomial dispute initiation model	25
2.4.2.	Determinants considered	28
2.5	Statistical Implementation and Results.....	35
2.6	Conclusions	40
2.7	References	41
3	Determinants of Bilateral Food Related Disputes	45
3.1	Introduction	45
3.2	Motivation for a bilateral approach	46
3.3	A bilaterally dependent dispute initiation model and estimation approach	47
3.4	Determinants considered	50
3.4.1.	Unilateral variables.....	53
3.4.2.	Bilateral variables.....	55
3.5	Statistical Implementation and Results.....	58
3.6	Conclusions	61
3.7	References	63

4	The drivers of dispute initiation under the World Trade Organization.....	65
4.1	Introduction	65
4.2	Determinants of the economic initiation condition	66
4.2.1.	Trade objective and related direct costs.....	66
4.2.2.	Potential indirect costs of dispute initiation.....	74
4.2.3.	Uncertainty of panel decision and compliance	78
4.3	Monitoring issues, upstream process, and political economy drivers.....	87
4.4	Conclusions	97
4.5	References	102